“Eventually Israel will be attacked by these clowns [Iran] and the whole farce will come to a very swift end as Israel deals with this demented nonsense once and for all.” — Frank

Respect for the Israeli’s is well-deserved; they have stood up against incredible odds and prevailed, and they took pre-emptive action against Saddam’s nuclear ambitions long before those ambitions were on many people’s radar screens (the WMD-denier’s notwithstanding).

But the Israeli’s are not invincible, nor are they supermen. We cannot continue to look to them to do that which we are ourselves unwilling to face. Their successive victories of the past have often been as much a factor of good fortune and luck, as they have been of military skill, and a desperate will to survive in a hostile land.

Surrounded by sworn enemies of increasing power and military might, they also face a growing enemy from within - a growing Islamic population of questionable loyalties, together with liberal self-hating Jews (at home and abroad), and a softer, spoiled, younger generation for whom the blessing of a nation to call home is now something simply taken for granted, never having known any other existence, other than the tiresome and senile war stories of their elders.

They are also faced with a world largely aligned against them, ready to blame them for the very existence of modern Islamic terrorism, a world ready to call them “occupiers”, and a world ready to supply money, weapons, and sympathetic support to those enemies whose sole goal is to destroy them, eager to trade Israeli land and security in exchange for vague promises of “peace” in our time.

Israel is nearly alone on the front lines of the global war against Islamo-fascism. It has been since the day of its founding - and Jews themselves since the founding days of Islam.

Israel persists, in the face of withering, non-stop criticism, and with an almost total lack of public support, even from those few such as the United States who nominally claim at least to be “friends” of the Israeli’s.

Israel deal with the demented clowns “once and for all”? You mean like they were allowed to do in Lebanon, with Hizbollah? That would be nice - and would even (still) be quite possible, if we all got out of the way and let them do it, “once and for all”. Even better if we got in there and actually helped.

Good friends give you advice. Real friends help you bury the bodies &hellip;
